The gathering enjoyed a large turnout and involved a stellar group of sponsors, speakers and panelists bringing attention and focus to Prostate Cancer. The theme for this year's Annual Meeting was "Share, Learn and Lead".

Attendees who had recently watched Discovery Channel's "First in Human" about Phase 1 Clinical Trials taking place in Building 1 at NIH heard from Dr. James Gulley on Immunotherapy and Prostate Cancer, a subject of his work in Building 10. Dr. Ashley Ross from Dallas spoke on "Advances in Prostate Cancer"; Mark Vieth spoke about the CDMRP, an important medical research program of the Dept. of Defense; another topic was the USPSTF's Guidelines on Prostate Cancer Screening presented by Dr. Michael Zaragoza. Panel topics ranged from "Advanced Prostate Cancer" to "Genomic Testing" to "Meet the States" to "New Products and Advances Benefiting Prostate Cancer Patients".

Two awards were presented, one for "Service to NASPCC", and one for "Outstanding Prostate Cancer Coalition of 2017". NASPCC President Merel Nissenberg of Los Angeles also received a Leadership Award from the organization.
